

Banjooli

Sebastian Herkner, 2013

The shape of the chair, and particularly the armrests, is inspired by the mating dance of male ostriches – banjooli in the Wolof language – who stretch out their wings to show off their beauty to the female.

Borrowing the brilliant colours of tropical birds, this light-hearted collection of seating and tables is designed to gather in flocks outdoors by the pool or perched on a high-rise terrace.

TECHNICAL INFORMATION

| Care         | Generally speaking, the threads can be cleaned with some neutral soap [pH7] diluted in lukewarm water. Once cleaned with the soap rinse carefully with plenty of water in order to remove any residual. AGGRESSIVE CLEANING AGENTS MUST BE AVOIDED as they could damage the threads irreparably. To ensure the lasting quality of these products the care and maintenance action needs to be carried out regularly and from the very beginning, if the products are exposed poolside or seaside the cleaning action must be carried on a daily basis.   |
| Maintainance | The items needs to be covered when not used or during severe weather conditions in order to PROTECT the structure and threads integrity. If the items are exposed to the direct sunlight, color variations or color loss need to be taken into consideration as the result of normal wear and tear. Check regularly if the glides are missing in order to avoid any possible damages to the structures and the floor. To ensure the durability of the products, ORDINARY USE IS RECOMMENDED. Do NOT sit on the tables or stand on the items.   |
| Warranty     | All items of this collection are entirely handmade; each piece is unique and variations of colors, weaves and shapes are not considered defects but rather peculiarities of these products. The M'Afrique collection is covered by our limited warranty for two [2] years from the date of purchase. The warranty does NOT cover defects or damages resulting from misuse, abuse, neglect, accident, unauthorized modification, unusual physical stress, improper testing, operation, maintenance or installation of the product. Normal wear and tear are expressly EXCLUDED from this limited warranty. |
